

CHARLOTTE ST. MARTIN

President, The Broadway League

Charlotte St. Martin is President of The Broadway League, having joined the organization as Executive Director in 2006. The Broadway League is the trade association representing commercial theatre in the United States and around the world. The 700+ member national trade association for the Broadway industry includes producers, theatre owners, and presenters of Broadway across the country.

During her tenure at The Broadway League, Ms. St. Martin has successfully managed various challenges affecting the industry including labor strikes, economic downturns, and government issues. Under her tenure, the League has created numerous new development and educational programs. In addition to her role in presenting the annual Tony Awards[®] with the American Theatre Wing, the League has recently started managing the National High School Musical Theatre Awards.

Ms. St. Martin's expertise as one of the highest-ranking women in the hospitality industry serves her well. She spent nearly three decades with Loews Hotels, where she held a variety of positions including Executive Vice President of Operations and Marketing, and President and CEO of Loews Anatole Hotel. She served as Chair of the New York Society of Association Executives and also served as Chair of both Meeting Planners International and the Professional Convention Management Association Foundations.

Ms. St. Martin currently sits on the Board of the CalAtlantic Group, Inc., one of the top five homebuilders in the United States. In addition, she serves on the Executive Committees of several nonprofit organizations including NYC & Co. and the Times Square Alliance, and on the Boards of The Actors Fund, Broadway Cares/Equity Fights AIDS and the Women's Forum of NYC.
